

Eurobase People secure 3 year 'TEN 2009/12 Framework Agreement' to supply temporary IT staff to the London Universities' Purchasing Consortium

23rd April 2010 – at the official launch event of London Universities' Purchasing Consortium (LUPC), Eurobase People were confirmed as the IT staffing specialist supplier under the new Framework Agreement for a 3 year period.

This followed their successful bid via a comprehensive tender process against competition from existing suppliers in London. This win further demonstrates Eurobase People's IT recruitment credentials in the public sector.

The agreement covers about 60 or so member organisations under the LUPC banner including universities, colleges and museums in and around London.

Comments Clive Newton, Operations Director at Eurobase People. "This is another good win for Eurobase People in the public sector. The key factors in our successful win were the quality and flexibility of our specialist IT recruitment services together with practical ways in which we can effectively work with member institutions to lower their costs, which is an obvious priority at this time. We would like to thank 'Supply London' who assisted us during the tender (Supply London's aim is to assist SME's in London to win business in the public sector)."

London Universities Purchasing Consortium (LUPC) is a not-for-profit organisation owned by its member institutions. These cover areas such as universities and colleges but also; The Health protection Agency, The Institute of cancer Research, The British Film Institute, The British Library and many museums.
